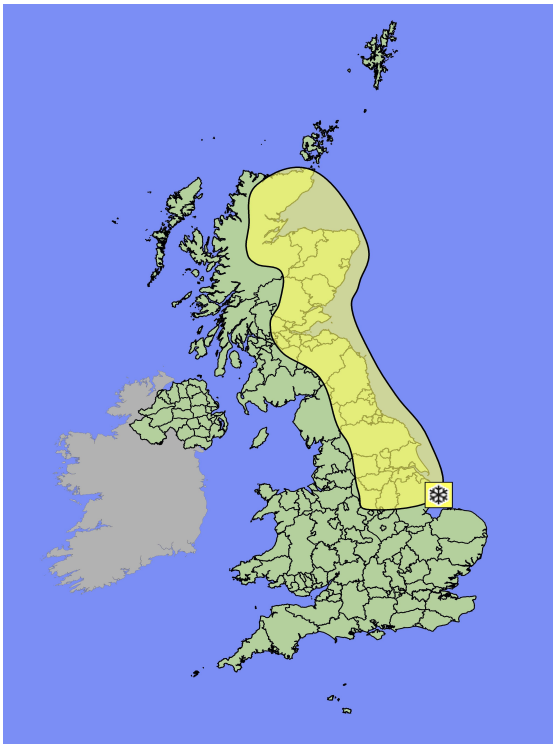
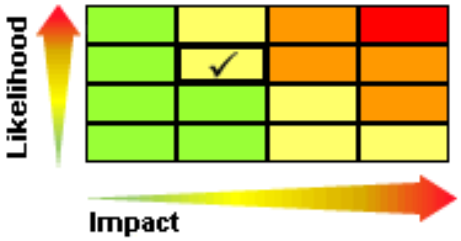
National Severe Weather Warning Service





Chief Forecasters Assessment
Very cold air will have spread westwards across most parts of the UK by late Sunday, with showers falling mainly as sleet and snow. The heaviest snow showers are likely in the northeast, with some moderate falls of snow occurring during Sunday night where these showers become banded, whilst other places will see very little snowfall.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Alert of Snow

Valid from 16:00 on Sun, 10th Mar 2013 until 09:00 on Mon, 11th Mar 2013

Snow showers will affect eastern and northern parts of Scotland, northern England and the northeast Midlands during Sunday and overnight into Monday, although only temporary accumulations of snow are likely during daylight hours on road surfaces.

Accumulations of snow will be very variable during Sunday night, as the showers are expected to become aligned into bands, with some places seeing 2-5 cm of snow and possibly as much as 10 cm over east facing slopes by Monday morning.

Lying snow will drift in the fresh to strong north-easterly winds.

The public should be aware of the risk of localised disruption to travel.
